ACTIVE STUDIES

(Completed studies are recognized in the listed publications)

Study Title	Project Summary	Principal Investigator(s)
Prioritization Project	The Prioritization Project will use existing detailed administrative data from 42 U.S. children's hospitals in the Pediatric Health Information System (PHIS) as well as over 600 hospitals in the Premier Perspectives database to identify pediatric hospital conditions that are prevalent and cumulatively expensive to the healthcare system, and that exhibit high degrees of variation in resource utilization. For a limited number of diagnoses, the Prioritization Project team will also seek explanations for extreme variation, both in terms of resource categories that may be driving variation (e.g. radiology, laboratory, or length of stay costs), and organizational factors associated with more cost-effective care (e.g. use of and adherence to clinical practice guidelines).	Raj Srivastava/ Ron Keren
I-PASS	Because communication and handoff failures are a root cause of two-thirds of "sentinel events"—serious, often fatal preventable adverse events in hospitals – improving handoffs has been identified by AHRQ and the Joint Commission as a priority in nationwide efforts to improve	Chris Landrigan, co-PI Amy Starmer patient safety. I-PASS is a 10-center study that is implementing a bundle of handoff interventions for residents, including: (1) Team training; (2) Redesign of the verbal handoff process, including the use of verbal mnemonics; (3) implementation and refinement of written / computerized tools to supplement verbal sign-outs. It will measure whether implementation of this bundle results in reductions in medical errors and improvements in care processes, and will evaluate institutional and patient-level factors that mediate its effectiveness in different settings.

PHIS+

The objective of the PHIS+ project is to build on the existing infrastructure provided by CHCA--a business alliance networking 43 of North America's leading children's hospitals--to augment its existing database with laboratory and radiology data for children seen in the ambulatory and inpatient departments of 6 large children's hospitals. The existing database, called PHIS, is a comprehensive pediatric database containing clinical and financial details of more than six million patient cases. The enhanced database, called PHIS+, will provide a rich data source for academic clinicians to answer in real time the comparative effectiveness questions that affect hospitalized children, thereby significantly enhancing the quality and scope of pediatric comparative effectiveness research.
